RESTORATION OF GRASSY WOODLAND

Enid L Robertson

Watiparinga Reserve Management Plan

$39.95
RRP

This celebrated case study of revegetation has inspired a generation of environmentalists.

The first edition was awarded an Australian Heritage Award in 1986 and has served as a model for many nature reserves.

The third edition, now in full colour, brings the story up to date and provides a wealth of pictorial information on minimum disturbance revegetation management.

Watiparinga is an important environmental and cultural conservation site. The greybox grassy woodland, only poorly conserved in South Australia, has been restored through thirty five years of careful management.

All organisations, groups, or persons beginning a restoration programme in degraded habitat will find much of interest in this management plan.

Restoration of Grassy Woodland is a valuable guide and resource for the managers of reserves, private landowners who wish to care for bushland and students undertaking environmental studies.
